

Prices of cardiac stents and bypass grafts

Overview

Understanding what you'll pay for a coronary stent requires separating two bills: the cardiologist's fee and the hospital's fee.

Key Takeaways

Cardiac stents typically cost between $300 and $5,000 per device, while coronary artery bypass grafting (CABG) procedures range from $20,000 to over $100,000 depending on technique and location.

A coronary stent is a small mesh tube inserted into a blocked artery to restore blood flow, usually via percutaneous coronary intervention (PCI). The cost of the stent itself varies:

- Bare-metal stents (BMS): Approximately $300 per stent
- Drug-eluting stents (DES): Up to $5,000 per stent due to advanced coatings that reduce restenosis. The total PCI procedure cost is significantly higher, ranging from $10,000 to over $50,000 before insurance adjustments, as it includes hospital fees, catheterization lab use, professional fees, anesthesia, and post-procedure care. For example, in Hong Kong, after subsidies, a PCI with one stent costs around HK$31,400 (original price HK$140,000), and with two stents, HK$52,000 (original price HK$160,000).

Coronary Artery Bypass Grafting (CABG)

CABG is an open-heart surgery that uses a healthy artery or vein to bypass blocked coronary arteries. Costs vary widely based on:

- Surgical technique: Traditional open-heart surgery, minimally invasive, or robotic-assisted CABG
- Hospital charges: Room, board, operating room, medications, and nursing care
- Surgeon and anesthesia fees: Experienced surgeons or prestigious hospitals may charge more
- Pre- and post-operative testing: Blood tests, echocardiograms, and cardiac catheterization Globally, CABG costs can range from $20,000 to over $100,000, with higher costs in specialized cardiac centers or developed countries . Minimally invasive or off-pump CABG may have slightly different pricing structures due to specialized equipment and techniques.

Factors Affecting Costs

- Number of stents or grafts required
- Urgency of the procedure: Emergency interventions are more expensive
- Insurance coverage and subsidies: Negotiated rates can significantly reduce out-of-pocket costs
- Geographic location: Prices vary between countries and hospitals
- Device type and technology: Advanced drug-eluting or bioresorbable stents are more costly than basic stents In summary, stent procedures are generally less expensive than CABG, but total costs depend on device type, hospital fees, and patient-specific factors. CABG remains the preferred option for complex multivessel disease or left main coronary artery blockages, while stents are widely used for less complex lesions.
